

Camden Museum – Volunteers we need you

Do you

- Love history and Museums
- Like meeting people with similar interests
- Have a few spare hours once a month
- Want to learn about your local area and the people and places that make up its colourful history

If you ticked any of these boxes why not become a volunteer at the Camden Museum to provide assistance to Museum visitors and the behind the scenes tasks that keep the Museum running.

The Camden Museum is located within the Library and Museum Complex in John St Camden and is open Thursday to Sunday each week from 11am to 4pm.

Museum Volunteers are mainly involved in greeting visitors to the Museum and ensuring their visit is enjoyable and a learning experience. You can be rostered on for as little as two hours once a month or for more hours, depending upon your availability and number of volunteers available.

Experienced volunteers are available to lead you through the roles of a Museum Volunteer with regular training days held to provide more information and other opportunities to be involved.

“I like the great atmosphere of the Museum and the range of interesting people who come in to visit” said Bob who volunteers a few times a month at the Museum. “They learn about Camden’s History and I learn new things just by interacting with them” he said.

For volunteers who are studying there is also the potential to assist with Museum projects and research.

Volunteers with the Museum cover all ages and experience, you just need the willingness to learn and enjoy yourself. People seeking volunteer work to meet their Centrelink requirements are able to do so through the Museum as it is a registered organisation with Centrelink.

The Camden Museum is operated by the Camden Historical Society and more information on becoming a volunteer can be gained by visiting its website on www.camdenhistory.org.au or contacting its Secretary on 0402 324 540
